

Voters Want a National Manufacturing Strategy

87%
Democrats

82%
Republicans

82%
Independents

Almost everyone I know thinks we should spend tax dollars to buy products made in the U.S.

More manufacturing jobs are being shipped overseas than returning to the U.S. I don't know many people that believe there is a 'reshoring' trend.

The way most trade agreements with the other countries are, we're not on a level playing field.

People I know from both parties agree that we should take on China for its cheating. I don't buy the 'trade war' argument.

There are plenty of people with the right skills, but there still aren't enough manufacturing jobs.

I think manufacturing employees are probably some of the hardest working people we have in Iowa.

Tell Congress and the President to rebuild America's middle class by creating a national manufacturing strategy.

www.americanmanufacturing.org/take-action

ALLIANCE FOR american manufacturing

Source: National poll of 1,200 likely general election voters conducted by the Mellman Group and North Star Opinion Research January 6-9, 2014.